

Week of July 11th, 2022

Hello future friend!

I hope you are enjoying your summer wherever you currently are! Yellow Springs weather has been almost perfect these past few days and I was able to catch my first firefly last night right in front of Main Hall. Being from Tacoma, Washington I had never seen them before coming to Antioch in 2018 and they are so magical. However, my name is Austin Korner and I am a graduate from the class of 2022 and the current Community Manager. As Community Manager I am tasked with supporting Community Governance at Antioch to help foster transparency, inclusion and to empower those within our community. Community is incredibly important at Antioch and I am very excited to be in this role and be able to work with all of you.

There are a few things happening this week!

First: Advisor pairings

Please keep an eye on your Antioch email for further information on your advisor assignment in mid to late July as we conclude our 1-1 introductory conversations with students and Student Success Coordinators. Your advisor is going to be the one to talk with you about what classes you should take and help you register for them as we enter August.

Second: Orientation leader connections

Please keep another eye out for more information on Orientation Leaders (OLs) and the fun things they will be doing with you. We recently hired all of the OLs.

Reminder: Placement Testing

Testing will be continuing this week. There will be a math placement test tomorrow, July 12th at 10:00am (EST) and a writing placement test on Thursday, July 14th. The sooner you complete your placement tests, the sooner you can register for classes and the class list for the fall looks amazing!

Please make sure to visit our New Student Orientation webpage to see previous communications and information related orientation.

I can't wait to meet you all on campus this fall.
