Change of a Major

Changing a major requires a student to seek advising support from the faculty advisor before a change of major can take place. Forms for declaring and changing a major are available in the Registrar's Office. Students may not change their major within two academic terms of their anticipated graduation.

Change of a Major to a Self-Designed Major

Proposals for the SDM will not normally be considered beyond the established deadlines for declaring a self-designed major (see Self-Designed Major (SDM) Policy). Students normally begin the process of declaring a self-designed major during the Fall term of their second year with the expectation of approval by the end of the Spring term.

Students who wish to change their major to a self-designed major outside of the established deadlines must submit a formal appeal to the Academic Policy and Review Committee (APRC) via the Registrar.

The Self-Designed Major (SDM) is available for students with special objectives that cannot be met by another major offered at Antioch College. It is not intended for use by students who, during their final year, have not met (or will not meet) the requirements of their intended major and are looking for an alternate path to graduation.
